Staples, organist, and Harry Nelson, tenor soloist. Decorations in the church consisted of white chrysanthemums and white gladioli in a setting of palms and other tropical foliage and lighted candles in branched standards.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length dress of French lace over satin and tulle. Soft folds of tulle with lace applique and pearl embroidery accentuated the portrait neckline. The voluminous skirt was gathered to the basque at the waistline and terminated in a circular train. The veil, a fingertip length circle of English illusion, was attached to a scalloped cap of lace and pearls, and the bride added a strand of pearls. Her flowers were a prayerbook shower of white roses from a white orchid.

Miss Gerry L. McCraw, the bride's sister, in topaz velveteen, was maid of honor, carrying a cascade of Talisman roses and bronze pompoms, and other attendants, in copper-colored velveteen and carrying showers of fall flowers were Mrs. C. J. Newcomb, Mrs. Harold Stratton, Miss Mary Ellen Moore, and Miss Shirley Faye Hendricks. Double Wedding

A lovely 6 o'clock candlelight ceremony Saturday evening, November 19, in Memorial Methodist Church united in marriage Miss Easley Rhoades Shuford to Richard M. Ferguson, and Miss Gwendolyn Holt Shuford to Ralph J. King.

The brides are the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Shuford. Mr. Ferguson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Ferguson. Mr. King is the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. L. King, of Ararat.

The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Lee H. Richcreek, pastor of the church, with the Rev. Floyd M. Lucas, of Elkton, Virginia.

Highlighting the altar of the sanctuary was a bronze cross flanked by brass candle holders and brass vases holding bronze and yellow mums and snapdragons. Against a background of greenery, branched candelebra lighted yellow candles cast a soft glow over the setting. Family pews were marked with sprays of mums and streamers.

Prior to the ceremony a program of nuptial music was rendered by Mrs. John Chandler, organist, and the Elder W. H. Carey, soloist. The traditional wedding marches were played.

Miss Easley Shuford, who was escorted by her father, chose as her maid of honor her cousin, Miss June Holt. Miss Gwendolyn Shuford, who was escorted by her uncle, R. Garland Holt, chose as her maid of honor Miss Vera King, sister of the groom.

Little Lois Morris was the flower girl and Robert Holt, cousin of the brides, was ring bearer.

David Ferguson was best man for his brother and Mr. King was best man for his son. Ushers included Bill Conner, Raymond Jameson, Jimmy Sanderson, and Alvin Boyd.

The gowns of the maids of honor were identical. They were mint green faille taffeta, the princess bodice was set off by a full skirt and matching mitts were worn. The head pieces were a small spray of flowers matching their arm bouquet. They carried bouquets of bronze and yellow mums. The little flower girl wore white and carried a basket of petals.

The brides selected identical gowns of white satin. The bodice was fashioned in princess line. The low round neckline was highlighted with imported lace, sequins and pearls, and a lace panel that extended through the skirt. The long sleeves tapered into points over the hands. The full skirt with insets of wide lace panels swept into a cathedral train. The fingertip veil of silk illusion was caught to the hair by a band of satin and lace trimmed with sequins and seed pearls.

The brides carried a cascade arrangement of roses and stephanotis centered with a white orchid. Their only ornament was a strand of pearls.

Mrs. Shuford selected for her daughters' wedding a gown of steel blue, complimented with a white pompom corsage. Mrs. Ferguson wore grey with a white rose pompom. Mrs. King was attired in white and her flowers were white pompoms.

The brides' parents gave a reception in the American Legion Hall, which was attractively decorated with fall flowers.

On their return from northern wedding trips, Mr. and Mrs. Ferguson will make their home in Appomattox and Mr. and Mrs. King will live in Richmond.

Both Mrs. Ferguson and Mrs. King are graduates of Madison College. Mr. Ferguson is a graduate of Appomattox High School, and is a veteran of World War II. Mr. King is a graduate of Madison College and attended the University of Virginia. He participated in the Korean War.

The Jaycees in their program, are following a trend of larger and of similar sized towns along the right of way of Transcontinental Gas line in an effort to bring to the community a new source of heat and power. Richmond, Va., Dec. 7.- Voters of Virginia will have the opportunity January 9 of authorizing a constitutional convention, empowered to clear the way for tuition grants for students attending private nonsectarian schools.

Governor Thos. B. Stanley fixed the date for the referendum in a proclamation issued Monday, which quickly followed General Assembly approval of the referendum bill in extra session last week. The bill, regarded as the first major step in the state's program to meet the problems created by the U. S. Supreme Court decision in the school segregation cases, was passed with only six dissenting votes. It swept through the House, 93 to 5, and then received Senate approval, 38 to 1.

The Governor appeared before both House and Senate to express his appreciation for their action.

"The manner in which you have approached the problem," Governor Stanley said, "is a credit to you, individually, and to the traditions of this historic legisaltive body. Everyone who wished to express himself, before committee and on the floor, has been accorded full opportunity to do so during the past four days. The debate has been dispassionate and informative.

"As I have said before, this is the first step in a process designed to preserve educational opportunities for children throughout Virginia, and to avoid enforced mixing of the races in the public schools."

The Governor, as did many of the members of the legislature, urged that all who believed in the administration program do their utmost to take the facts to the people so that they would be fully informed prior to the January 9 referendum.

Senator S. Floyd Landreth, State Republican Chairman, was among those voting and speaking for the bill, and plans were under way today for an organized, non-partisan campaign to take the story of the school program to the people throughout the state. All of the Republican members, except one, supported the legislation.

If the constitutional convention is approved by the voters, the regular session of the Assembly in January then will provide for the election of delegates and the date for the constitutional convention.

Senator Garland Gray, of Waverly, chairman of the Governor's Commission on Public Education which recommended the program, said the question in the referendum was simply that of asking if a convention should be held to amend Section 141 of the Constitution.

Proponents also told the Assembly the program was designed to preserve educational opportunities throughout the state, rather than impair them. Some critics argued the program would weaken or destroy the public school system.

Senator Robert Y. Button, of Culpeper, a member of the State Board of Education, answered that argument this way:

"What the Gray Commission did was to present something to try to save the schools.

"The absolute absence of other plans and suggestions is of great significance. The issue before us is just this simple: First, if the people of Virginia want to operate an integrated school system with compulsion, or to have no public schools or no public educational opportunity for children, then they should vote against the convention. If, on the other hand, the people want to empower the General Assembly to provide some educational opportunity for all, they should vote for the convention."

The one question on the ballot January 9 will be: "Shall there be a convention to revise the Constitution and amend the same?"
